

In-Article Placement Options

Top Center

Renders after third paragraph of the story cked [...] because why would anybody buy tickets for face value plus 10% when face value tickets exist? George Fox told The Guardian after reportedly losing £340 when the show clashed with a vacation.

That meant Ed's team selling more [of their own tickets] as nobody could buy off anybody else who couldn't go. Thousands went to waste, to their advantage, whether intentional or not."

Mid-Story Center

Renders after the 6th paragraph of longer stories

[CMA] said promoters and venues should either offer a full refund to ticket buyers who cannot attend an event, or provide arrangements that allow them to "recoup or substantially reduce any direct financial loss.

Bottom of Content

